

Branham Group Names Memory Experts as Canada's #1 IT Security Company

Portable security devices supplier also ranks in top 50 technology companies

Montreal, CANADA & Santa Ana, CA – March 15, 2006 – Memory Experts International™, a provider of portable security devices, today announced that it has been named as Canada's #1 IT security company in the prestigious Branham300, published today. Memory Experts has also been ranked #49 in Branham's Top 250 Canadian Technology Companies.

The Branham300 is the most comprehensive source of information on the top 300 privately and publicly held Canadian information and communications technology ("ICT") companies in Canada ranked by 2005 fiscal year end revenues. Branham's 13th annual listing is available in the March/April issue of Backbone magazine which is distributed primarily to subscribers of The Globe and Mail in most major city centers across Canada as well as through corporate alliances with Bell Canada, Air Canada, Industry Canada, numerous technology associations, trade shows, select local newsstands as well as individual subscribers.

Memory Experts' secure products division, MXI Security, is now sampling a new breed of USB mass storage devices, the MXP product family. The new portable security devices combine the power of secure storage with digital identity, cryptography, and strong authentication services and are specifically designed to address current security challenges faced by large enterprises and government organizations. The company's portable security devices enable organizations to use multiple security applications using a single device with reduced complexity and more portability than other solutions.

"We are thrilled to be recognized in a listing that is the benchmark for the visibility of the Canadian ICT industry both domestically and globally," said Lawrence Reusing, CEO of Memory Experts. "We are proud of the market traction of our new portable security technology, which is based on the integration of many years of expertise in the storage industry and best practices from the security industry."
